COURSE DESCRIPTION

After the financial crisis and recent corporate scandals at Wirecard, Volkswagen, Sanlu, Deutsche Bank, and many others, the call for ethical management of businesses, especially multinational corporations, has increased dramatically. In this course, we will explore the broad area of business ethics. As a theoretical foundation, ethical theories will be considered, and concepts like sustainability, corporate social responsibility, and corporate citizenship will be analyzed.

Moreover, in the age of globalization, climate change, and grand challenges such as the coronavirus SARS-CoV-2 pandemic, business increasingly takes place in an environment where political and cultural boundaries that challenge corporate values are constantly crossed. Businesses are consistently confronted with issues such as environmental depletion, poverty, child labor, bribery and corruption, ethnic and religious discrimination, censorship and privacy issues, fair trade, and consumer boycotts, to name a few. Thus, we will address, for example, the challenges that organizations face, when trying to conduct business ethically, what it takes to be a good corporate citizen, and how companies can address stakeholder demands.

Students will acquire basic knowledge of ethics and business ethics. They will become familiar with and learn how to address the challenges that organizations face when attempting to conduct business ethically, be a good corporate citizen, and handle stakeholder demands.

COURSE DESIGN AND ASSIGNMENTS

The course is divided into a (1) lecture, which will present the main content, and (2) a tutorial, which will examine case studies and texts. The quality and outcome of both the lecture and the tutorial depend on the participation of students. It is expected that students engage in both formats.

In the tutorials, texts will be analyzed and cases will be discussed. These materials are also relevant for the examination. Therefore, we expect students to read the respective material before every session and to actively participate.
